U.K. beefs up Belfast forces

BELFAST, May 6 (Agencies) -Britain announced today the despatch of troop reinforcements to Northern Ireland as the province braced for fresh violence following the death of IRA hunger striker Bobby Sands.

 A defence ministry unn-ouncement in London said 600 men from the army's "Spearhead" battalion, the Royal Regiment of Wales, were expected to arrive in morning--when the province's Roman Catholies are expected to take part in Mr. Sands' funeral.

The troops are the first reinforcements sent to this strifetom British province for more than two years. The British army now has 11,100 men in the pro-

Catholic youths protesting against Mr. Sands' death took to the streets of Belfast again today, hurling petrol bombs and stones.

But the level of violence was nowhere near as high as had been feared.

A police spokesman said it was remarkable that fewer than 10 people had been seriously hurt in the violence, which yesterday saw hundreds of petrol bombs thrown at police and British troops and at least eight shops and businesses gutted by fire.

Mr. Sands' body lay in an open coffin at his Belfast home, which was visited by thousands of mourners prior to tomorrow's military-style funeral at which Republican guerrillas are expected to fire volleys of shots into He died early yesterday morning in the Maze Prison hospital after a 66-day fast to press demands for himself and other jailed gunmen of the outlawed Irish Republican Army (IRA) to be classified as political prisoners. People waited in drizzling rain for hours before entering the Sands home in groups of two or three, to pay their respects to the body in an open hardwood coffin. While behind bars, Mr. Sands was elected a member of the British Parliament and already ranks as a martyr in the IRA campaign to end British rule in Northern Ireland. The sight of Mr. Sands' emaciated body, reduced from 70 to 38 kilogrammes, caused mourners "He looks like an infant, very small and very frail. It's really beartbreaking, especially for his mother and sister. I don't think I could go in again," said one mourner.

SSC gets ID 1m loan from Iraq

AMMAN, May 6 (Petra) — The Social Security Corporation (SSC) today received a loan of one million Iraqi dinars from the Iraqi workers' pension and social security as a security of the securi urity corporation, in accordance with an agreement signed between the two bodies in February of this

The low-interest loan will be used to finance the SSC's operations and projects, according to SSC Director Farhi 'Ubeid. Mr. 'Ubeid praised the cooperation between the Jordanian and Iraqi social security corporations, and expressed Jordan's appreciation for the loan.

Spring Festival to come to Amman

AMMAN. May 6 (J.T.) — The Spring Festival of art held recently in Aqaba will be reassembled at Al Hussein Youth City (Sports City) on May 19, Sports City Director Isam Arida was quoted as saying today.

He told Al Ra'i newspaper that he had requested the Mmistry of Culture and Youth and the Jordanian Artists' Association to move the exhibition here, with the aim of offering the chance for the Three hundred paintings by 150 Jordanian artists were displayed at the Agaba festival, and Mr. Arida said he hoped that the exhibition at Sports City would remain open for a whole week.

If you are running hard for a deep ball, hit it up in the air. First of all, the high ball will give you a chance to catch your breath and get back to set position. It will also discourage your opponent from approaching the net. The lob also acts as an effective device to break up a slammer's rhythm.

Occasionally on short balls, especially on down-the-middle balls where there is little passing angle, a quick lob can be effective and actually almost an offensive weapon. Give yourself plenty of margin and get the ball well into the air. Any time you are: successful at getting the lob over the net man's head, move into the net yourself. Even if the lob doesn't sink on the baseline for a winner, it does push him off the net, which makes passing shots easier to manage.

If you are standing well behind the baseline lob. Lob often if the sun is a factor. Lob if the wind is a factor, but don't lob too high (it is quite hard to judge a smash in the wind). On a hot day, lob, frequently, early in the match. This will wear out your opponent on a day in which fitness could be the determining factor.

The lob can also be used as an approach shot. If you send the: ball up high and deep, follow it and come to the net. Split stop close to the service line as it bounces. Chances are that the shot returning to you will be high and weak -- and you are ready to

As you can see, the lob is an advanced finesses shot. The player with a skillful lob will consider it a valuable part of his game.

The most remarkable achievement of the council has been the establishment of the Jordan Handicrafts Development Centre Company, which "came a time when the council was faced with cooperation with the Jordan the limitation of voluntary work," Handicrafts Development Centre Mrs. Nasser said. company's board of directors. "I was the one who made that combination with the aim of reaching different kinds of people and getting them involved and interested for the sake of crafts development and not for profits," Mrs. Nasser

On the council's relationship with the IDB, Mrs. Nasser said the council recommends craftsmen for loans, though the money is distributed on an individual basis.

On the future plans of the Jordan Crafts Council, she said the council is thinking of starting its own handicraft development projects. The first one will concentrate on ceramics. "I hope that project will be open within a month, since we have two people ready to work and we have the know-how also," she added.

The proposed ceramics project will benefit students training in ceramic work at the Ministry of Education, "who are apparently not interested in what they do," Mrs. Nasser said. The Ministry of Social Development will also be involved in experimenting with ceramics along with the crafts council.

The council's ambitions are not confined to traditional crafts exhibitions. It is now planning the establishment of a Jordan crafts village. Mrs. Nasser said that though the plan look very ambitious, the experience of the council with Jordanian crafts makes the future promising. "When we started our work some nine years ago, we began from scratch since we had neither the money nor the know-how," she said. But with the establishment of the Handicrafts Development Centre Company, the council's work became easier.

Mrs. Nasser told the Jordan Times that the crafts village would be a place for "experimenting on crafts, displaying them and selling them.

"But now we need more efforts, money and commitment to reach that projected goal," she said.

SECRETARIES and their employers, instead of each going home and forgetting about one another, were still together on Monday evening - but steno pads and typewriters were replaced by decorations and party pla-

The Secretary's Day Part at the Jordan Intercontinental Hotel saw quite a turnout. The new ballroom was decked out with refreshments and flowers, and to add to the festive mood, a band played at one end of the long hall. The room hummed with conversation of the guests, who were greeted at the door by Mr. and Mrs. Marc Hamel (the hotel's general manager and his wife), and

Mr. Keith Cramer, resident

manager of the Intercontinental.

The guests included Alia personalities including Mr. Fahed Fanek, the airline's finance vice president; Ms. Claudette Safi, secretary to the public relations vice president; Ms. Victoria Bawwab, Jordan's Red Cross secretary; Mr. David Zweifel, deputy chief of mission at the American embassy, and Mr. Carmelo Foti, who is Jordan's representative of Manufacturers Hanover Trust Company and who has only been in Jordan

Perhaps the longeststanding of the secretaries present at the party was Mrs. N. Sadi, who has been an executive secretary at the Arab Shipping Company for the past 21 years. And to add to her record, she has had the same boss all this time -Mr. Hamad Al Farhan, who regrettably was unable to attend the function.

since the beginning of January.

Mrs. Sadi has been working since before she married. She started as a stenographer with UNRWA, and she has not quit yet. Her three children however - a boy and two girls - have never suffered from having a working mother.

"Sometimes I overdo it," Mrs. Sadi admitted, referring to her tendency to overindulge her children, "But most of my free time is theirs. never an visiting " added.

Another secretary who has been with the same organisation for many years is Miss Hopi Benayan, who was one of the hotel's first secretaries - and evidently the only one who stayed she's been there since it first opened 17 years ago. Miss Benayan is the secretary of the hotel's resident manager, and she said that she is very happy here," adding that she does not like to change once she has settled into a good job.

Miss Emily Ghattas has worked for Alia for 10 years now, and she has held secretarial posts for the past 18 years. Miss Ghattas also enjoys her job as Chairman Ali Ghandour's executive secretary. Asked how long she plans on staying with Alia, she jokingly replied, "As long as they want me!"

Not all of the girls at the party have been in the working world for such long periods of time, however. Miss Randa Rabie, who has been working with the auditing firm of Arthur Anderson for three months, began her career only two years ago. But she enjoys her work very much. Her last job was at the cement factory; and she "plans on staying with Arthur Anderson forever, because they make me feel like a secretary.'

Another young working girl - only 22 years old -spent one year in the accountancy department of Chase Manhattan Bank, But she left the bank because she felt that her degree in business administration, with a minor in economics was being wasted. Miss Sonia Zabaneh is a secretary in the public relations office of the Intercontinental, a job she has held for only two months. Once again, Miss Zabaneh enjoys her job, but says that her goal is "to be an assistant rather than a secretary.

WANT to lend a hand in helping the needy? Reach out and take the American Women of Amman's own Helping Hand.

The Helping Hand, a small shop which has recently moved from Jabal Luweibdeh to Jabal Hussein, carries almost anything one could need. All of the items for sale are second-hand, and prices range from 25 fils to JD 5.

Mrs. Louise Carty is one of the ladies in charge of the Helping Hand, which operates under the patronage of the Rural Development Soc-

"All of the net proceeds go to Jordanian charities, which will be selected by the American Women's Club," Mrs. Carty told a visitor at the shop's open house Monday morning.

Mrs. Carty is no stranger to the operation of thrift shops. Before she came to Jordan two years ago, she had been instrumental in setting up such a shop in the Seattle. Washington area, the proceeds of which were donated to a rehabilitation home for wayward boys. The Helping Hand, therefore, was a natural way for her to continue in her service to her community.

"And if it weren't for the great support and efforts of Mrs. Patricia Veliotes (the wife of the former American ambassador to Jordan), the whole project might never have got off the ground," Mrs. Carty said.

"One of the problems we face in a project such as this is the transient nature of the American community, as people are leaving all the time. But as there are many American women married to Jordaníans living here, we are hoping that they will keep up the continuity of the Helping Hand."

The shop is run entirely on a volunteer basis, and Mrs. Carty hinted that "we are always looking for volunteers." She added, "and we welcome other nationalities."

All the items for sale which are priced "as low as possible" - are donations. Mrs. Carty has invited anyone interested in helping out or donating any items, clothing articles included, to contact her at Tel. 67944; or to stop by The Helping Hand on Thursdays or Saturdays between 9:30 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. "As long as we get donations, we'll keep on selling!" was her answer to how long she thought the shop would remain in operation.

GOOD NEWS for the art world in Jordan: With the full backing of Spanish Ambassador Dor Luis de Pedroso, the Spanish embassy has opened an art gallery on the premises of the Spanish Cultural Centre in Jabal Amman.

Artists are invited to exhibit their paintings, sculptures, photographs--you name it--free of charge.

The gallery is under the direction of Mr. Jose Luis de Presilla, director of the Spanish Cultural Centre, who says he will be as happy as anyone else when the spotlights focus on the work first exhibited there. Step forward, somebody!

More absurdities

THE DIRECT entry of the United States and the Soviet Union into the Lebanese peace-making process is a mixed blessing, demonstrating yet again the world's meekness in the face of Israeli intemperance and exaggerated selfimportance. The disconcerting aspect of Soviet-American involvement in the Syrian-Israeli confrontation taking place on Lebanese soil is that it raises the stakes and changes the nature of the essential point in dispute. What started out as an Israeli-Palestinian confrontation in southern Lebanon is being expanded into an issue that now revolves around Israel's presumed right to determine the kinds and quantities of Syrian defensive armaments in northeastern Lebanon. The entire Lebanese landscape, in other words, has been transformed into a function of Israel's self-defined security requirements, based on effective control of the land of its Arab neighbours. For the Americans and Soviets now to step into the picture with their envoys will only cement this absurdity and institutionalise the Israeli penchant for deeper and deeper military involvement in the affairs of the region. Will Israel, and its subservient American paymasters, soon ask for Israeli control of the Lebanese mountaintops as the only means of assuring the "security" of a vague concept of political Zionism whose only clear element during the past 100 years has been its appetite for more Arab land and the destruction of more Arab communities? Will the absurdities never cease?

ARAB PRESS COMMENTARY

AL RA'I: We hope that European and world public opinion will learn a real lesson from the ferocious campaign which Mr. Menachem Begin has unleashed against West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing. in which he accused them of avarice and gave them insulting and inappropriate descriptions.

At first glance, it might appear as if Mr. Begin wanted to take a hard line to exploit it in the elections. This is what some West German newspapers said. Others said that the Israeli prime minister might have been in a state of hysteria.

Although these two motives-the elections and a state of hysteria--cannot be ignored, they are not the only two explanations for the background of Mr. Begin's campaign against Evidently there are other reasons behind this campaign, and perhaps these reasons are the prime movers of the onslaught.

-- a feverish Israeli attempt to abort the European initiative before it is officially submitted. The choice of Bonn and Paris as a direct goal is because of their independent line in their relationships with the Arabs, and their effective influence within the European group.

- the domineering tactics which Israel has habitually employed in its international relations by brandishing the weapon of anti-Semitism. For the first time, the Bonn government declared its rejection of such tactics when it described the Begin campaign as methodical moral extortion, and that Israel should not interfere in the relationships between Bonn and the Arab states.

-- brandishing a political club in the face of European and American political circles which take the national interests of their countries as their first consideration, and intimidating them by unleasing hysterical campaigns such as the campaign against Mr. Schmidt and Mr. Giscard d Estaing.

AL DUSTOUR: The serious implications of the Lebanese crisis and its impact, on the regional and international levels, clearly indicate the role of the Damascus rulers in dragging Lebanon and the whole area into the storm of the international struggle and reducing the Arab and Lebanese role, thereby giving Israel the justification and the opportunity to become the most effective side in the Lebanese arena.

The ruling clique in Damascus diverted the Arab Deterrent Force from its main task--namely to support the legitimate Lebanese authorities and to achieve reconciliation among the Lebanese, as well as to restore peace and stability to Lebanon--to become a party in the Lebanese dispute, carrying out acts of terrorism, murder and political extortion against the Lebanese people. Meanwhile, the Damascus rulers have closed their eyes to the Israeli infiltration into southern Lebanon and the recurrent onslaughts unleashed by the Zionist enemy against Lebanese cities, villages and Palestinian refugee camps, killing innocent, unarmed people and trying to liquidate the Palestinian resistance and the nationalist forces in Lebanon.

Furthermore, the Damascus rulers fabricated incidents in the Zahle area to facilitate Israel's domination, from southern Lebanon to the Bekaa Valley; making this vital area subject to the storms of internationalisation and creating justifications for foreign intervention. The fumbling of the Syrian regime will lead to an expansion of the scope of internationalisation, to include all Lebanon.

High vs. low B interes

By Jawad Ahms

The debate over the anti- consistent of discrete units w inflationary impact of interest rates may never be resolved. There are some who debate that low interest rates in an inflationary world are antiinflationary. Others argue that low interest rates fuel inflation. The truth is not eternal, and the current situation in Jordan might offer a good reference.

Interest rates in Jordan are by no means free to move. Like mast prices, they are held by the throat by the strong grip of government. Their movement is a slowly creeping one and barely adjusts for the price rise. In Jordan, we consider the market of credit to be

Mr. Begin's outbursts were triggered by an interview Mr. hmidt gave in Saudi Arabia during which the chancellor talked about a divided Germany's moral obligation to support the Palestinian right to self-determination. Mr. Schmidt reported about his trip to Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates to his cabinet today and sources speculated he would also comment on the Begin remarks. A Schmidt statement about his Middle East visit was scheduled to be given in parliament tomorrow.

Faction yesterday, Mr. Schmidt apparently declined to answer Begin's attacks. An SPD spokesman said the chancellor had nothing to add to remarks by a government spo-kesman who Monday labelled Begin's remarks "besides the point and insulting."

Meanwhile in Tel Aviv Police today arrested 10 orthodox Jewish Israeli youths who went on a window-smashing rampage against a house owned by a German Christian Fundamentalist group.

A police spokesman said the Jewish seminary students smashed windows and caused thousands of dollars of damage late last night to a building in Zichron Yaakov that is the communal residence of about 100 German Christians

The police would draw no connection between the incidents but, it was the first time the group's building had been vandalised since the commune was founded

The spokesman said police took the attack most seriously, and set up tight roadblocks around the town about 25 kilometres south of Haifa to catch the attackers. He said police believe there were more than 10 youths involved, and the roadblocks remained in position today.

Yesterday a top diplomat in Israel's foreign ministry called in West Germany's charge d'affaires in Tel Aviv to deliver a protest over Chancellor Helmut Schmidt's remarks favouring Palestinian rights.

"I explained to him that many of the things Schmidt said not only insulted us and were most negative, but also were inaccurate and based on a lack of understanding of the area," Mr. David Kimche, foreign ministry director-general. told Israel Television.

West German Charge d'Affaires Dr. Franz Sekura declined commenting on the meeting.

Mr. Kimche said he assumed his talk with Mr. Sekura was similar to a meeting Israel's ambassador in Bonn would have with German foreign ministry officials. "I'm sure relations will be tense for a time," Mr. Kimche said, "but we hope the relations between both countries will continue as they were before Chancellor Schmidt's

Minister Menachem Begin appeared to be regaining electoral favour today with an opinion poli showing him within grasp of winning Israel's general election next

The survey came in the middle of a crisis in which Mr. Begin's forceful opposition to the deployment of Syrian ground-to-air missiles in Lebanon has drawn widespread Israeli public support. According to poll figures published by the English-language Jerusalem Post, Mr. Begin's Likud bloc coalition is now running neck-and-neck with the opposition Labour Party, which at the start of the year was expecting a landslide victory.

The poll showed that Likud and Labour could each expect to win 41 seats in the 120-member Knesset. Likud's present coalition allies, the National Religious Party (NRP), could expect nine seats in this estimate.

Taking into account other right-wing splinter groups, Mr. Begin could well put together another coalition if these figures pro-

The findings were a severe disappointment to the Labour Party, which until recently had hoped for a victory big enough to put the party in power free of any coalition shackles.

At the beginning of the year, when the Begin government was buffeted by economic problems and torn by internal squabbles, Labour believed it could win easily on domestic issues. The annual inflation rate of 134 per cent was already at the top of the World League and getting worse. Social problems were rife and the government was beset with scandals involving corruption. Then Mr. Begin brought in a new finance minister, Mr. Yoram Aridor, who threw out all previous policies calling for strict control of public spending. Mr. Aridor embarked on a tax-cutting programme coupled with reimposition of subsidies on basic food products.

The result was a fall in food prices and a rush to buy consumer products like colour television Labour warned that the money being handed out by the treasury now would need to be recouped with interest after the election.

MIDDLE EAST BRIEFS

Arafat discusses Lebanon in Kuwait

KUWAIT, May 6 (R) - Palestine Liberation Organisation (PLO) leader Yasser Arafat discussed the crisis in Lebanon today with the Amir of Kuwait, Sheikh Jaber Al Ahmad Al Sabah, the official Kuwait news agency said. Mr. Arafat arrived last night from Saudi Arabia on a Gulf tour which Palestinian sources said was aimed at urging support for the PLO and Syria in the crisis. In Saudi Arabia Mr. Arafat had talks with Crown Prince Fahd and met Austrian Chancellor Bruno Kreisky. Fighting last month in Lebanon has led to rising tension between Israel and Syria. Israel has insisted that Syria withdraw anti-aircraft missiles it stationed in Lebanon after Israeli planes shot down two Syrian helicopters. Kuwaiti Minister of State for Cabinet Affairs Abdulaziz Hussein left for Damascus with a message from Sheikh Jaber Al Ahmad to Syrian President Hafez Al Assad, the Kuwait news agency said.

Egypt calls for Israeli-Syrian restraint

CAIRO, May 6 (A.P.) - Foreign Minister Kamal Hassan Ali yesterday appealed to Israel and Syria to practice self-restraint over the ground-to air missile crisis in Lebanon. Egypt hopes that neither Syria nor Israel would escalate the situation further." Mr. Ali said in a statement to the Middle East news agency, "We hope that the Lebanese crisis be solved as soon as possible and that shedding blood will be stopped immediately, Mr. Ali added. He said Egypt has condemned the Syrian "escalation" and the Israeli "intervention" in

U.N. conference deplores Israeli hindrance of assistance to Palestinians

MANILA, May 6 (R) - Arab nations persuaded a United Nations conference on human settlements here today to pass a resolution deploring Israel's failure to implement previous decisions on assistance to Palestinians. The vote was 17 in favour and one, the United States, against with 15 abstentions and 25 delegations absent. The European community abstained. In what Israeli ambassador to the Philippines Moshe Raviv called a very significant development, the Latin American countries at the conference, with the exception of Cuba and Jamaica, also abstained.

The resolution called for continued efforts to deliver assistance to the Palestinians, and urged the general assembly to deplore what it called the obstacles set up to hinder assistance to the Palestinians by Israel. Before the vote, Mr. Raviv told delegates that the proposal "represents a clear attempt to politicise this conference. The best way to assist the Palestinian inhabitants in these areas is to convince them to join in the autonomy negotiations and not by passing resolutions.

Kuwaiti daily suggests Arab RDF

KUWAIT, May 6 (R) - A Kuwaiti newspaper suggested today that Gulf states set up their own Rapid Deployment Force (RDF) to foil U.S. plans to protect them. Al Qabas said the American RDF would be an "occupation force" and proposed that the six conservative states in the new Gulf Co-operation Council should form a joint force to counter any threats against the area. It said this would boost the principle that Gulf states must be responsible for their own defence and block attempts by the United States to spread its influence over the region." Gelf officials say privately that Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and the four other oil states in the Co-operation Council differ too much on defence policy to make overt joint action possible at present. But co-ordination of defence policies is one of the long-term aims of the

King Hassan envoy in Iraq

BEIRUT, May 6 (R) - A personal envoy of King Hassan of Morocco arrived in Bagndad today with a message to Iraqi President Saddam Hussein and reiterated Morocco's support for Iraq in its conflict with Iran, the Iraqi News Agency reported, It said the message, delivered by Information Minister Abdelwahed Belkaziz, concerned bilateral relations and Middle East developments. It was announced in Rabat vesterday that King Hassan had sent about 10 envoys on a tour of some 90 countries to explain what was described as the serious situation arising from Libvan threats to Morocco. The diplomatic campaign followed calls by Libyan leader Muammar Qadhafi for an alliance between Libya. Algeria, Mauritania and the Polisario guerrilla movement in the Western Sahara, aimed at "encircling feudal reaction in the

912 kg. of opium seized in Iran

BEIRUT, May 6 (A.P.) — Iran's gendarmerie has seized a haul of Afghani opium totalling 912 kilogrammes in the eastern Kerman Province, the official Iranian Pars news agency reported today. Pars said the first haul of 555 kilogrammes was discovered yesterday in the false bottom of a tanker truck on the Sanedan-Bam route in eastern Iran close to the border with Afghanistan, It said 357 kilogrammes of opium were seized April 30 in the same region.

Oil/ministers call for price freeze

KUWAIT. May 6 (RT-A growing number of OPEC ministers today backed the idea that the oil exporters' group, should freeze prices when it meets in Geneva on

Here for talks among Arab oil ministers, Dr. Mana Said Al Oteiba of the United Arab Emirates told Reuters prices should be frozen during a present glut on the world market but not cut.

Qatari Minister Abdul Aziz Bin Khalifa Al Thani predicted that the May 25 meeting would agree to such a price freeze.

The current president of OPEC (the Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries). Oil Minister Subroto of Indonesia, said in Djakarta he saw signs that the 13 members would agree to hold pri-

Meanwhile, Saudi Arabia's Oil Minister, Ahmad Zaki Yamani. lobbied colleagues here to stress his concern that OPEC should reunify crude oil prices but denied that he had requested a price cut as the means to achieve this.

Saudi Arabia, the biggest producer and leading price moderate. today charges $32 a barrel for Saudi Arabian light crude, the traditional marker on which the 13 OPEC members align prices with differentials added for higher-quality grades.

But an OPEC majority at present aligns on a notional rate for the marker of $36, with quality producers ranging up to the S41 charged by Libya for its sweet Zuetina crude.

Saudi Arabia supports proposals for future pricing formula to stabilise the world market by indexing OPEC prices to the West's inflation and economic growth. But Sheikh Yamani argues that this will not work unless the price spread is narrowed. Talks resume today for extending textile treaty

GENEVA, May 6 (R) - Talks on a new international textiles agreement will resume here tomorrow with the European Economic Community (EEC) outlining its case for holding down imports from the third world, diplomats said

Strong differences of view are certain to be aired because developing countries have vowed to stand firm for freer trade during the two-day meeting at the headquarters of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT).

No conclusions are expected but diplomatic sources said the talks in GATT's 50-nation textiles committee would set the tone for hard burgaining sessions later this year.

The EEC and a group of developing countries which are net exporters are sharply divided over what should replace the present multifibre arrangement (MFA) which runs out next December 31 after a four-year extension.

The EEC commission wants to scrap a clause guaranteeing export growth rates for developing countries, arguing that growth in EEC consumption of textiles should be the criterion.

But leading Third World exporters will remind the panel that their share of EEC markets declined between 1977-79 while that of the United States soared, diplomatic sources said.

Colombian Ambassador Felipe Jaramillo said he would speak for the developing countries and stress they will stand united in the face of EEC attempts to separate more advanced nations like Hong Kong, South Korea, India and Brazil from the rest.

The EEC Council of Ministers is due to finalise the community's MFA position on June 22.

Both exporters and importers can draw ammunition from a new report by the committee's working group which examines how far MFA countries have tried to adjust to changing con-

Bonn to increase aid to Bangladesh

BONN, May 6 (R) — West Germany has pledged increased development aid to Bangladesh during the visit to Bonn of Bangladesh President Ziaur Rahman.

The Development Ministry said Bonn would add 18 million marks ($8 million) to the 267 million marks ($118 million) it gave Dacca last year in aid for family planning, agriculture and energy

President Zia, on a five-day official visit, told a news conference yesterday that he and West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt agreed on the importance of the North-South summit meeting planned for Mexico next autumn.

He praised West Germany's role in helping Bangladesh explore its energy resources, which he said included oil, gas and coal. Bonn had expressed interest in helping coal and limestone mining projects, the president said.

He said his government wanted to involve private West German firms in Bangladesh and had recently legislated to protect

Mobil accused of breaking sanctions

WASHINGTON, May 6 (R) - A private legal group has accused Mobil Oil Corporation of shipping oil to Rhodesia from 1967 to 1979 in violation of U.S. law and United Nations trade sanctions.

The Washington-based International Human Rights Law Group said yesterday it had obtained customs documents from Mozambique showing Mobil shipped oil to Mozambique marked to go to Rhodesia. Mobil denied the charges.

Previous U.S. treasury department and congressional investigations dismissed the allegations, but the law group said the documents had not been available until now.

The U.N. imposed sanctions between 1967 and 1979 against formerly white-ruled Rhodesia, which became the independent state of Zimbabwe a year ago.

A case of inconspicuous consumption in Canada

By Stuart Marshall

Compared to British and European motorists, Americans are well pampered. But even they are not so well off -- compared to the Canadians.

LONDON: Earlier this month, my Peugeot 305GLD estate had its engine oil and filter changed. The bill was £16.96 - £6 for 5 litres of oil, £3.15 for the filter, 10p for a gasket, £5.50 for labour and £2.21 VAT, I had booked the service that morning and it took the garage 25 minutes.

Last week, in a B.P. garage on the outskirts of Toronto, I saw an identical service performed on a big American V8. The operation took 10 minutes; the motorist had literally driven in off the street; and it cost him C$9.98 (£3.90) including 5 litres of B.P. Super Visco 10W-40 lubricant and the filter.

While I was still getting over the shock, the motorist went round to the pump island, filled his tank with unleaded premium fuel at 31 cents a litte (54p an Imperial gallon) and bought a car wash ticket for 48p. He nosed his car into the wash tunnel.

A conveyor pulled it through slowly while it was drenched in detergent, brushed from every direction, waxed and blown dry. emerging really clean and shining in three minutes. (The wax is perfumed to the buyer's choice -pine, I was told, was the most popular.)

All of this led me to draw two conclusions. First, that I really must carry out my own 3,000 mile services in future. And secondly, that the Canadian motorist must be the most pampered in the Westem world.

Even by North American standards the Canadian car owner is getting an exceptionally good deal from companies like B.P. that are fighting for his custom. If the man I had watched had wanted a full 33 point service and inspection, with lubricant and filter changes, chassis greasing and a thorough check everything from the tyres to fluid levels, it would have cost the equivalent of £8.54, inclusive of products and labour. All done while he waited, of course.

charging motorists extra if they and suffering traffic jams by day pay by credit card. "You've got to be kidding" was the reaction of one B.P. manager when I told him that a service charge equal to 50 cents was now common (and some might say sharp) practice at U.K.

At 54p an imperial gallon, Canadian petrol is so cheap that U.S. drivers are pouring over the border to brim their tanks and save about U.S.$9 per gasguzzler's tank full.

The influx has reached such proportions that the local tabloid daily headlined a story: "Gas hungry Yanks fuel town's ire." The citizens of Fort Erie were, it was And there is no nonsense about said, being kept awake at night and the city council was preparing a by-law forcing gas stations to close between 1 a.m. and 7 a.m.

The car totally dominates the transport scene in Canada. Motorists each drive about 12,700 miles a year, mainly in medium or large-sized American designed though locally manufactured cars. Foreign -- and principally Japanese -- cars now hold 27 per cent of the market.

Although, for some years, pet-rol has been sold by litres, and highway distances measured in kilometres, Canadian motorists still tend to think imperial. They are allowed to drive a little faster than the Americans -- 100 km/h compared with the U.S. limitof 88 km/h. Canadian exhaust emission rules are easier, too, though they are tougher than in Eur-

Just how heavy a burden the U.S. emission control standards put on a driver's pocket was revealed by a recent series of tests, carried out on Renault 5s with controls to U.S. Canadian and European standards.

The consumption figures were 25 mpg (U.S.), 33 mpg (Canada) and 43 mpg (European) which goes to show that what you gain on the environmentalist's roundabout, you lose on the fuel conservation swings.

Q. - Every now and then you use terms in your column that are unfamiliar to me. Two in particular crop up quite often-dummy reversal and double dummy. Both sound like double talk to me. Can you explain?-R. Kennedy, Houston, Texas (This question has been awarded the weekly prize.) ly used to refer to the play of a hand which is so perfect that it seems that the player was looking at all four hands. It comes from whist, where a form of the game called Double Dummy was played by two people, each of whom was partnered by a dummy hand that was open on the table. It evolved into solving problems, either of full or partial hands, where all four hands were shown.

Dummy reversal is a common, though not easily recognized, technique in the play of the cards. Instead of using dummy's trumps to ruff losers, declarer ruffs dummy's losers in his hand and utilizes dummy's trumps to draw the enemy trumps, thereby gaining one or more tricks. A clue to when you should try to make the dummy the master hand is possession of high trumps in dummy. Consider this hand:

◆ A 9 7 5 ♥ Q 109. ♦ 1083

♦ Q76 ♠KQJ10 +8642 ♥853 ♦ Q52 ♦ AK97 +J943 4 108 ♥AKJ74 ♦ J64 AK52

South is declarer at four hearts and West leads the king of spades. Declarer has three diamond losers and has to worry about the fourth club. If he draws trumps and clubs do not break 3-3, declarer will have to lose a club trick and go down one.

One line of play is to draw only two rounds of trumps, then play three rounds of clubs. If clubs are 3-3, or if the hand with four clubs also has three hearts, the contract will be made. As the cards lie, that line of play fails.

The high trumps in dummy are the tip-off that a dummy reversal may succeed-that needs only a 3-2 trump division. Win the ace of spades and ruff a spade. Enter dummy with the nine of trumps and ruff a spade high. Cross back to dummy with a trump and ruff the last spade with deciarer's last trump.

Now get back to dummy with the queen of clubs and draw that last trump with the queen, discarding a diamond from the closed hand. If clubs are 3-3, declarer will make an overtrick. As it is, he comes to ten tricks: three spade ruffs in hand, three trump tricks in dummy, the ace of spades and three club

Giscard: 'I've led France through 7 years Mitternand: 'What can you do tomorrow?'

Who came out winner in French TV debate?

PARIS, May 6 (A.P.) — In a crucial televised debate aimed at 36 million voters, French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing and his Socialist challenger Francois Mitterrand concentrated on the two themes that have dominated the campaign - unemployment and a communist role in government.

The face-to-face encounter. which may determine the outcome of Sunday's election, ran 25 minutes over the scheduled one hour 50 minutes and also involved foreign policy, the economy, nuclear energy and defence.

Mr. Giscard d'Estaing, engaged in a fight for re-election to a second seven-year term, turned the first 35 minutes of the debate into a discussion of how Mr. Mitterrand would govern with the Communist support necessary if he is to be elected. He questioned Mr. Mitterrand's plans for quick legislative elections to win a governing majority.

Mr. Mitterrand cou-nterattacked over the economic record of the last seven years, which has left 1.6 million out of

The incumbent contrasted his experience, often with "tough moments," with Mr. Mitterrand's position as "minister of words." Mr. Mitterrand pointed out that his role had been that of opposition leader and that he had built the Socialists into the largest single party in the nation over the past decade

At Mr. Mitterrand's insistence, the debate was supposed to be American style with journalists asking questions. Mr. Jean Boissanat of L'Expansion an economic magazine, and Mr. Michele Cotta, a political reporter for Radio Television Lumbrg, did guide the discussion and kept track of the time. But the two candidates often talked past them and spent much of the time in a French style classic face-to-face enc-had always wanted. Both men were seated at desks with papers to refer to in front of them. Mr. Giscard d'Estaing, a modern era politician who has mastered the use of television, appeared comfortable except at the start while Mr. Mitterrand, who began his political career

Only in his closing five minute statement did Mr. Mitterrand come alive, evoking subjects he had wished to raise. He mentioned the Third World, and the problems of Central America and moral role France should play.

In his closing statement, the president said seven years as France's leader had changed him.

court. Sir Michael told a jury of six men and six women that police questioned the soft-spoken, 34-year-old truck driver from Yor-of attacks, the worst reign of terror against women in British criminal history. Eight of the victims were prostitutes and each camp and claimed his life had been in danger. "Whatever I did was only to save my life," the 74-year-old retired Waterbury, Con-

sian through an interpreter in the second day of a deportation hearing. Mr. Fedorenko was denaturalised last month after witnesses from the infamous Treblinka death camp testified he had tortured and killed Jewish prisoners. "Never in my life have I hurt or hit a person," the gray-haired Fedorenko said in a firm voice. Under questioning by federal immigration lawyer Jospeh Lynch.

however, he made several statements that conflicted with previous statements allegedly taken by federal authorities. Mr. Fed-orenko told Mr. Lynch he never worked in the section of Treblinka with the gas chamber. During questioning in 1976 by an immigration and naturalisation service investigator, however, he was recorded as saying, "I was where the gas chambers were."

afterwards. Mr. Giscard d'Estaing also said exchanges of messages with Mr. Brezhnev had shown the Soviet leadership had had "great hesitations" before going into-Afghanistan.

Mr. Mitterrand accused the president of being hostile to the Camp David agreements on the Middle East, and of being photographed in Jordan looking at Israel through binoculars.

Mr. Giscard d'Estaing replied that Egyptian President Anwar Sadat agreed with his analysis of the agreement -- and that the photograph had been taken at a Paris racetrack, because he had banned all photos during his visit to the Jordan Valley.

Yorkshire Ripper under trial

A stab in the eye for an 'accusing stare'

LONDON, May 6 (Agencies) - Peter Sutcliffe, who has admitted 13 slavings of women blamed on the "Yorkshire Ripper," killed his last victim as she looked at him" with an accusing eye." the Old Bailey central criminal court was told today.

Attorney-general Sir Michael Havers told the jury of six men and six women that Sutcliffe, 34, stabbed Leeds University student Jacqueline Hill in the eye, bashed in her skull, slashed her across the head with a knife and stabbed her in the breast. Miss Hill. 20, was slain as she returned to her university residence Nov. 17. Sutcliffe was arrested Jan. 2, ending a five-year manhunt for the man who was named after the notorious "Jack the Ripper" killer of prostitutes. Police say eight of Sutcliffe's victims were prostitutes. The soft-shoken, bearded truck driver pleaded guilty to 13 counts of manslaughter, and seven charges of attempted murder of women who survived his attacks, when his trial opened last week. But he is claiming innocence of murder charges on grounds of insanity.

Sutcliffe was expressionless as Sir Michael described the attack on Miss Hill.

Sir Michael said Miss Hill's underclothes had been pulled off and her body multilated by a hammer and chisel or screwdriver. Sutcliffe was quoted as telling police in a statement: "I pulled Miss Hill's clothes off. Her eye was wide open and she seemed to be looking at me with an accusing stare. This shook me up a bit so I jabbed ascrewdriver into her eye.'

The attorney general said yesterday when the trial resumed that the jury had to decide whether Sutcliffe was mentally sick, as doctors say he is, or whether he was trying to dupe them.

According to a statement Sutcliffe made to police he killed his first victim, prostitute Wilma McCann, because she taunted him sexually, Sir Michael said.

Start of a purge in Yugoslavia

BELGRADE, May 6 (R) — The resignation of the Communist Party chief in the southern Yugoslav province of Kosovo appears to be the start of a party purge following Albanian nationalist riots there last month, informed sources said today.

Mr. Mahmut Bakali, 45, resiened at a provincial party committee meeting yesterday. Many speakers called for a purge following a report criticising the party for inefficiency and inertia in not heading off the riots, in which at least nine people died.

Mr. Bakali said he accepted the greatest share of responsibility for the riots, which have shaken the Yugoslav federation of several historically antagonistic nationalities.

The sources said the calls for a purge were likely to be heeded as the federal government was clearly worried by a resurgence of extremist nationalism.

Nationalism has always been a cause for anxiety in Yugoslavia, even during the long rule of President Tito, the symbol of national unity until his death a year ago.

Communist Yugoslavia was born out of a civil war fought within the war against Hitler.

Tremor in

strong tremor shook central Greece today causing panic, but there were no reports of casualties or damage, a police spokesman said

Athens observatory said the tremor registered 4.8 points on the Richter scale and its epicentre was 160 km northwest of Athens, adding it came at 0318 local (0018 GMT).

The tremor sent people here into the streets and many slept in squares and nearby fields fearing a stronger tremor, the police spokesman said.

An appeal to Red Brigades:

NAPLES, May 6 (A.P.) - Breaking the family silence the eldest son of a prominent local politician kidnapped by the Red Brigades has appealed to the left-wing urban guerrillas to free his father.

"We don't know what to do. All we know how to say is that the life of our father and relative is tied only to a small gleam of humanity that certainly resides also on you. Mr. Bernardo Cirillo, 36, said in a one-page message to his father's abductors given to an Italian news

It was the family's first statement since a Red Brigades kidnap squad seized Mr. Ciro Cirillo, 60, a member of the governing. council of the Campania region and a former regional president, 16 days ago.

Armed youths killed Mr. Cirillo's bodyguard and driver, and wounded his secretary, in the abduction. They have not yet set conditions for Mr. Cirillo's release. A police investigator told joumalists that police have not found any major clues in more than two weeks of searches of houses and apartments, and checks of passing cars at roadblocks.

children were freed from a stone quarry about 20 kilometres north of here where they had been kept illegally for several months as bonded labourers, it was reported here. More than 20 families at the villages of Lakharpur in Haryana State were put on trucks by social workers and taken to a nearby hamlet where they were to be housed in a school until they could secure new jobs. news reports said. The quarry owner, identified as S.H. Sharma, was not present when the workers were taken away. The labourers were recruited about seven months ago from the western and central states of Maharashtra and Madhya Pradesh when workers at a private stone crushing firm in Lakharpur struck for higher wages, the reports said. Although promised nine rupees ($1.08) a day for men and seven rupees (84 cents) for women, the labourers were given less than half those amounts and were paid only sporadically, they told a truckload of reporters accompanying the opposition politician who organised the release. According to the news reports, the quarry owner had paid the train fares of the labourers from their homes to Lakharpur. The

A thousand killings 'out of conviction'

DUESSELDORF, West Germany, May 6 (R) - A lawyer defending a woman Nazi concentration camp guard accused of mass murder said yesterday it had never occurred to the woman that the system was criminal.

Defence counsel Hans Selas was addressing a Duesseldorf court trying Hermine Ryan, 61, on charges of murdering more than 1,000 people at the Maidanek camp in German-occupied Poland during the Second World War.

Mrs. Ryan was born in Vienna and later became an American citizen, but was extradited nearly eight years ago to stand trial with eight other people in what has become the longest Nazi war crimes
